(Compiled by J. Eastman 8/14/95)

NOTE: The original photolog entries as listed in the "Excavation Day Book," used an unusual numbering system: for a 36-exposure roll, the entries started with "36" and descended down to "0." However, I have renumbered these entries as well as the actual series of 8x10 prints so that they match the numbers on the negatives. The five rolls of film seem to be about the only photos taken of the excavation, judging from the photo entries in the "Excavation Day Book". The five rolls are designated (in chronological order): 1975, A, B, A', C, and D. The "Subject" entries iven here are taken directly from the "Excavation Day Book." All five sets of negatives were found in the lab trailer during the present project and new prints made. The negatives and new prints are stored in archival sleeves along with the artifacts and other associated records at NASA-Langley Research Center.

AERIAL PHOTOGRAPHS SHOWING HISTORICAL FEATURES

These photographs were found in the lab trailer at the Chesterville site. They were evidently acquired from the NASA-LRC archives at the time of the dig by the excavators based on their depiction of historic structures on NASA-LRC prior to construction and demolition. The negative numbers listed are NASA-LRC file negative numbers and can be used to obtain reprints.
